Sisters of Providence present Mother Joseph statues to Providence executives

The Sisters of Providence presented miniature bronze statues of Mother Joseph to two Providence executives in June and July. The presentation to Mike Wilson, who retired in April 2009 as chief executive officer of Sacred Heart Medical Center and Holy Family Hospital, was made in Spokane on June 16 by Sisters Margaret Botch, Annette Seubert and Rosalie Locati. Russ Danielson, who will retire December 31 as senior vice president and chief executive of Providence's Oregon Region, received the statue of the foundress of the Sisters of Providence in the West from Provincial Superior Karin Dufault and Provincial Councilors Judith Desmarais and Maureen Newman on July 12 in Portland.

Only 100 of the miniature statues were cast by Felix W. de Weldon, who created the statue of Mother Joseph that has been housed in the Rotunda of the U.S. Capitol since 1980. Mother Joseph is kneeling beside tools she used to make architectural drawings for construction of hospitals and schools in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and southern British Columbia.

The statues are presented "in honor of significant accomplishments and/or contributions to the Sisters of Providence." Selection factors may include tenure of service, quality of service, furtherance of the mission of Providence, etc.

Mike's wife Carol also attended the lunch at Clinkerdagger's restaurant in Spokane where his presentation was made.

Wilson was a Providence executive for 27 years, beginning with six years as president of Holy Family Hospital. He then took over leadership of the Heart Institute of Spokane at Sacred Heart Medical Center. Since 1991 he has held a number of executive positions at Sacred Heart, including chief operating officer, president, and ultimately chief executive of both Sacred Heart and Holy Family.

In presenting the statue, former Provincial Superior Margaret Botch praised Wilson's contribution to the mission of Providence, "particularly at Sacred Heart Medical Center where you oversaw major expansion like the Surgery Center and Women's Health Center, and the creation of Sacred Heart Children's Hospital and

- even more - assuring needed services, like psychiatry and emergency care for patients who are uninsured and have no ability pay." She also acknowledged Wilson's crucial role in development of the region's largest health care collaboration, Inland Northwest Health Services, and advancements in research, robotic surgery and transplant services; his contributions to the community which earned the respect colleagues who elected him president of the Washington State Hospital Association, "and especially through your warm and kind way of being a friend to so many."

Russ joined Providence in March 1985 and has led significant growth in programs and services, first at Providence Portland Medical Center and then throughout the Oregon Region.

"When the Leadership Team of Mother Joseph Province decided to give you this statue we saw her spirit and character in you, and we wanted to honor your contribution to the Sisters of Providence and the Providence mission given in the spirit of Mother Joseph of the Sacred Heart," Sister Karin told Russ. "Your contribution to the mission of Providence, particularly in Oregon, but also throughout Providence Health System and since 2005 throughout Providence Health & Services, has been significant.

"You have strongly supported clinical and service excellence and diversity initiatives, as well as expansion of community benefit and outreach services, community partnerships and ministry leadership," Sister Karin said. She also praised his community contributions, his professional and personal qualities that have made him an asset to many not-for-profit boards and committees, and the respect and admiration he has earned from colleagues statewide.

"You have been a great friend of the Sisters of Providence during your leadership, keeping them informed and included in every way, which has been gratefully appreciated," she said. The sisters also sent a basket of flowers to Russ' wife Terry, in appreciation of the role she has played in supporting his work. ●

Coming to the West!

Women and Spirit: Catholic Sisters in America, the traveling exhibit created by the Leadership Conference of Women Religious (LCWR) has secured two venues in the West. The exhibit is slated for June 19 to August 14, 2011, at Mount St. Mary College in Los Angeles, and for January 24 to June 3, 2012, at the California Museum of History, Women & the Arts, in Sacramento, Calif.

The Sisters of Providence, Mother Joseph Province, are well represented in the exhibit through artifacts, photographs and film loaned from the Providence Archives.

LCWR has initiated a project to produce a full-length documentary on the contributions of Catholic sisters to the history and culture of the United States. The DVD will include the documentary and bonus features that could include an online exhibit catalog, as well as videos that are part of the exhibit.

For more information about the exhibit, go to www.womenandspirit.org. ●

Lectureship honors sister's work in palliative care field

Provincial Superior Karin Dufault's contributions advancing the quality and reach of palliative care are being recognized with a lectureship named in her honor.

The inaugural Sr. Karin Dufault Lectureship in Palliative Care will fund one of the keynote speeches at the Recovering Our Traditions congress on palliative care. The meeting will be held October 28-30 in St. Louis and is presented by the Supportive Care Coalition: Pursuing Excellence in Palliative Care.

Sister Karin was executive director of the group of 20 Catholic health organizations from October 2005 to December 2009, until she left to assume the role of provincial superior of Mother Joseph Province. The Supportive Care Coalition has its office at Providence Portland Medical Center. Providence Archives launches digital database Providence Archives has launched a new online digital collection database that hosts thousands of historic photographs documenting the Sisters of Providence and their ministries, along with images of many artifacts. The general public may browse through any of the nearly 80 collections available or perform advanced searches from any computer with Internet access. The database can be accessed online at providencearchives.contentdm.oclc.org.

"It's an exciting development and one that I have been working on for years," said Peter Schmid, Providence visual resources archivist. "Until now, Providence Archives has used a database that was accessible only to archives staff." The database contains nearly 10,000 items, which is only a fraction of the tens of thousands of items in the archives, but it will grow over time as archives staffers Emily Dominick and Pam Hedquist catalog artifacts and add them to the database. If you have questions about the database, Peter can be reached at peter.schmid@providence.org. ●

Women's Hearth bids farewell to longtime director

Mary Rathert, OP, said goodbye after 12 years of service as program director at the Women's Hearth, Spokane, at a farewell event in her honor in July.

The Women's Hearth is part of the intercommunity ministry Transitions, which is sponsored by the Sisters of Providence, Sinsinawa Dominicans, Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, and the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia.

Here's what the Transitions newsletter had to say about Sister Mary:

Mary will leave behind an impressive legacy of care and support for local women at the Hearth. With determination, heart, and soul, Mary has navigated the Hearth through tremendous growth. What began as the Drop in Center in a small, dark rented space on Howard Street is now our own beautiful and bright Day Center on Second Avenue where local low-income and homeless women are provided more than 100 different services, classes and activities each month by a staff of highly trained professionals and volunteers.

Mary has been a champion for these women. More than 125 may come through the doors of the Hearth on any given day. Each one can expect to be welcomed with respect and dignity to a place where she is accepted for who she is, and into a community designed to allow for her personal growth and wholeness. A fierce advocate for justice and protection for women, Mary has been an inspiration within the Transitions community and within the Spokane Community. We will miss her very much.

Sister Mary is taking a sabbatical before heading to Africa in February. The new program director at Women's Hearth is Edie Rice-Sauer, whose years of experience include as development director at Volunteers of America, as director of a domestic violence shelter for women, and as a mental health planner for Spokane County. ●

Providence ElderPlace writer finds inspiration in Mother Joseph

Ginny Foster

“For many years, I wrote poems and plays,”

Providence ElderPlace Glendoveer resident Ginny Foster said. “But when I came here 2 ½ years ago with a terminal diagnosis of stage 4 metastatic breast cancer, I didn’t think I’d be writing again.” That was before she was encouraged by Brooke Meyer, Glendoveer life enrichment coordinator, to sign up for the Write Around Portland workshop held there this spring. Ginny not only reconnected with her writing but connected with fellow residents in the process.

“It got us talking about writing. We learned that everyone had talent,” she said. “The workshop inspired me to know that there were other people who write, and I still see members of our group writing every day.”

Ginny’s poem, Midnight Sweetness, was published in Write Around Portland’s 32nd anthology, The Top. Ginny credits the bowls of oranges where she lives and Mother Joseph as the inspirations for her piece. She read the poem at a community reading attended by more than 250 people, including her fellow workshop participants, and she also was invited to read it at a recent Glendoveer anniversary event.

– by Robyn Steeley, executive director of Write Around Portland

Write Around Portland

(www.writearound.org) is a nonprofit organization founded in 1999. It provides 10-week creative writing workshops in partnership with social service agencies and health care providers serving people living with HIV/AIDS, survivors of domestic violence, adults and youth in addiction recovery, low-income seniors, people in prison, homeless youth and others who may not have access to opportunities for writing in community because of income, isolation or other barriers. The spring workshop Ginny attended was the second Write Around Portland workshop at Glendoveer. The organization also has partnered with Providence Integrated Cancer Center at St. Vincent Medical Center to provide a workshop for women with metastatic cancers. ●

Midnight Sweetness by Ginny Foster, Providence ElderPlace Glendoveer

Mother Joseph rings the after-hours bell cha ching cha ching

returning at midnight from a begging trip asking the storeowners and the bankers

oranges for the poor
 oranges for the poor

cha ching cha ching

her black habit frames her plain, unappealing face as she waits for the smallest sister to rouse and let her in she goes out to shake the orange tree in the courtyard

oranges for the poor
 oranges for the poor

the smells of the midnight orange Mother Joseph
 hungry after her journey breaks it open

peeling it in the moonlight the gleam of the white pith the juice dribbling down her humble chin where three hairs grow

At Glendoveer I get an orange from the bowl

oranges for the poor
 oranges for the poor

number two grade oranges refused by grocery stores with scars
 soft spots
 strange brown islands

we old people have our own bruises from falls
 freckles
 our skin stained like the skin of oranges

it’s midnight
 and juice dribbles down my chin white fiber lines the orange white hair outlines my face a touch of acid

 but we are sweet inside the aides

 they wait for us to get by leaning on our walkers as they hurry to bring the clinking cart of metal oxygen tanks

cha ching cha ching

they see us when our teeth are in a jar
 our flabby bodies in the shower

we too are not perfect but still they care for us

I love the aides
 I love Larry’s garden but most of all, I love the oranges.
